Then I felt this terrible pain in my legs. I had landed on the rocks below. Man, I knew I had really hurt myself. My legs felt funny, and I couldnt seem to move my feet. I tried to crawl up to the parking area, but the pain was more than I could stand. I heard another gun shot and a large rock, near my face, exploded, sending pieces of it into my cheek and face. Looking up, I could see Crazy Abdul staring down at me. He had a wicked smile, and his eyes were filled with hate. from THE GARGOYLE BAT The GARGOYLE BAT is a fast, fun read for early teens or for those adults who, to some degree, are forever trapped in the magic of that age.
