

BaxterBy Julia McNair WrightThe classic 1870 fiction from True Story Library.“Tell me a story,” said a little girl to me one day.“Yes,” I said; and I took from a box a picture. “I will tell you about this good man.”The little girl looked at the picture some time. Her lip rolled up, her nose rolled down, and her little black eyes rolled every way.“I don’t want to hear about him,” she said.“Why not?” I asked.“Oh, ‘cause; he looks so sober and so prim, and he wears a night-cap. I dare say he has the earache,” replied this queer little girl.“If that is the case, I will tell you the story of a boy named Dick” I said.This kindle edition is scanned from the original hardcover book.
